Adler Pelzer Group Selects Ohio for New Manufacturing Facility

Based out of Hagen, Germany, Adler Pelzer Group (APG) is a worldwide leader in design, engineering, and manufacturing of acoustic and thermal components and systems for the automotive sector. APG is represented in 21 countries and four regions with more than 70 locations and 11,000 employees worldwide.

With an entrepreneurial spirit, APG is always seeking ways they can expand their mission and be more accessible.

Improving Customer Reach

As a leader in the automotive industry, APG wanted to establish a North American hub that would allow them to reach more customers in the U.S. APG sought a location that would enable it to quickly establish operations and provide it with convenient access to reach customers in both the northern and southern regions of the U.S.

Location is Key

APG decided on a pre-existing facility in Oregon, Ohio, as their newest North American site. It is located in Northwest Ohio, just outside of Toledo, and the new facility will offer convenient and cheap access to customers and suppliers. Ohio is a U.S. automotive powerhouse and offers APG one of the nation's best logistics assets. The state is geographically located within a one-day drive of more than 60% of the U.S. and Canadian populations. Moreover, the state is close to other strong automotive markets, including those in Michigan, Tennessee, and Indiana. Because of this, APG will be able to serve more customers in the U.S. using its newest facility in Ohio.

AGP has committed to create 80 jobs and invest $10 million in the project.

We selected this location because the region offered a site that was ready for our company to start up immediately, and we definitely saw a favorable business environment. In our business, geographical proximity to OEMs is significantly important because we produce large components, meaning the cost of logistics is critical. We see this location as ideal for our customers to the north and south.”
